

•• CLAUDE CODE • DAILY DRIVERS

5 HACKS.

That change how you build with Claude Code.

01

ORCHESTRATION

Agent Teams

Sub-agents that share context.

Dispatch agents that remember each other.

- Split research / implement / verify across agents
- Give them one shared brief so they stay aligned
- Use a final pass to merge – don't serial-pingpong

Saves hours: parallel work with shared memory cuts build time vs one agent at a time.

02

MCP

Context7 MCP

Live docs, no stale answers.

mcp-server-context7 – real-time framework docs.

- Enable Context7 (or equivalent docs MCP)
- Name the library + version in the ask
- Prefer “look up current docs” over memory

Saves hours: fewer wrong APIs and fewer “that option was removed” rabbit holes.

03

SKILLS

Custom Skills

Reusable behavior, install once.

~/claude/skills/*.skill – auto-loaded.

- Package the prompt you retype every week
- One skill = one job (review style, commits, tests)
- Keep them short and opinionated

Saves hours: Claude starts every session already knowing how you work.

04

REVIEW

/ultrareview

Code review by parallel agents.

/ultrareview – cloud-fan-out review.

- Fan the repo out to parallel review agents
- Fix severity-ranked findings – worst first
- Re-run after big fixes; don't boil the ocean

Saves hours: catches expensive bugs before PR ping-pong / production.

05

THE CHEAT CODE

A real CLAUDE.md

The setup most builders skip.

Conventions, testing, where features live.

- Conventions: naming, folders, “never do X”
- Testing: commands + what “done” means
- Map: where each feature / package lives
- Prefs: commit / PR / tone rules

Saves hours: every answer after this file gets sharper — you stop repeating yourself every week.

Quick-start order

1. 05 Write a real CLAUDE.md — biggest leverage
2. 02 Add Context7 MCP — kill stale docs
3. 03 Package one weekly custom skill
4. 01 Try agent teams on your next feature
5. 04 Run /ultrareview before the next big merge
